Plant protection products shall be entered in the Register of Plant Protection Products if evidence has been provided that they are sufficiently effective in restricting harmful organisms and safe for the crop. Such evidence shall be obtained by means of efficacy testing trials for the registration of plant protection products. The regulatory enactments for performance tests have specified requirements for the performance of tests. The certificate for the performance of testing of the effectiveness of plant protection products shall confirm the fulfilment of the requirements specified in the regulatory enactments regarding registration of plant protection products.
